LEARNING OUTCOMES

Programme: Philology

Level of education: second cycle studies

Educational profile: general academic profile

I. General information

1. Organizational unit offering the program: The Department of Philology
2. The field of study: the humanities, general academic profile
3. The educational program as related to the mission and strategies of the University of Białystok: The aims of the University of Białystok focus on carrying out research and didactic work correlated with the needs and specific conditions of the local area. The philological educational program meets the following mission statement objectives of the University of Białystok:
 - to offer first, second, and third degree studies (in accordance with the Bologna Process) with a special focus on the quality of education;
 - to enhance cooperation with economic operators;
 - to take advantage of the geo-economic location of the university and enhance cooperation with the neighboring countries, to take into consideration the educational needs of the Polish Eastern European diaspora;
 - taking into consideration the multicultural character of Podlasie, to commence a platform for tolerance and cooperation between national and religious groups as well as to create academic discourse which has respect for plurality of opinion and dignity of other people;
 - to integrate the academic community of Białystok by enhancing research and didactic cooperation between local universities

4. General learning outcomes, work prospects and the continuation of education by the graduate:

The main learning outcome is acquiring thorough and comprehensive knowledge in the chosen field of study: linguistics, literary studies, cultural studies, applied linguistics. Students who complete the second degree program should demonstrate proficiency in foreign language (C2 CEF level). They should be also capable of integrating their knowledge and skills from various fields of the humanities and applying them practically to handle unusual professional tasks. Moreover, they should be able to solve professional problems on their own and offer their judgments in their trained field with respect to ethical, legal and economic aspects when coping with limited data. They should also know how to manage teamwork and successfully communicate with both professionals and non-professionals. The graduate of the program is open to and tolerant of other cultures and languages. Depending on the mastered field of study, the graduate is ready to work in the institutions of culture, state administration sector, educational institutions, publishing houses, magazine editorial staff, mass-media sector, research institutions, and the sector of market services requiring proficient knowledge of languages and cultures. The graduate can also pursue the occupation of a teacher provided that he/she completes the teacher specialization program (in accordance with the educational standards of teacher courses offered by Teacher Education Center of the University of Bialystok). Furthermore, the graduate is ready to pursue research challenges and third degree studies (doctoral studies).

5. The processes of defining the learning outcomes and creating the program of the studies as related to the opinions of the stakeholders, particularly students, graduates and employers:

In accordance with the objectives formulated by the Senate of the University of Bialystok, the Department of Philology takes into account the current national and regional demographic conditions as well as students' preferences and the demands of job market. Defining the learning outcomes and creating the program of the studies followed an opinion poll conducted among the stakeholders. The quality of teaching offered by the University is reflected in high qualifications acquired by the graduates and their readiness to do professional work. Additionally, in order to improve the attractiveness of the educational offer, the Department introduces new specializations to its offer.

6. Admission requirements (candidates' required competences, particularly as regards second degree studies):

It is expected that the candidates for second degree studies have basic linguistic competence and knowledge of literature and culture in the chosen specialization and are able to put it into practice in their lives and their professional work respecting ethical standards.

7. Professional title acquired by the graduate: Master's degree
