MODULE CONTENT

MK_1 Theory and Methodology

This module expands the students' knowledge of theoretical approaches to international relations and the methodology of the humanities and social sciences, as well as develops the student's skill of using information available through IT.

MK_2 Law and Economics

This module provides knowledge concerning the legal aspects of international relations, including EU economic regulations, diplomatic and consular law, and international human rights protection. The module also focuses on development economics and international competitiveness.

MK_3 History and Politics

This module presents classical and contemporary political thought and provides an in-depth knowledge of the historical background of diplomacy in international relations.

MK_4 Theme 1 – Evolution of International Conflicts from the 19th to the 21st Century

An elective thematic module. It deals with problems such as the historical and social background of international conflicts as well as means of waging war and warfare strategies. It also focuses on the role of propaganda in international conflicts and on how international conflicts are depicted in literature and art.

MK_5 Theme 2 – Civilization of the Post-Soviet States

An elective thematic module. The subjects comprising this module focus on religion and the historical background of contemporary problems in countries such as Belarus, Ukraine, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, and regions of Central Asia and the Caucasus.

MK_6 Theme 3 – The Middle East and North Africa (MENA)

An elective thematic module. It deals with the historical background of political, economic, military and cultural issues arising in the counties of the Middle East and North Africa.

MK_7 Elective Subject Module

The module contains elective subjects dealing with specific issues concerning the historical background of international relations. Elective Course 2 is taught in a foreign language.

MK_8 Diploma Subjects

The aim of Dissertation Seminars 1-2 is to prepare the student to write a master's thesis on problems regarded as falling in the area of the historical determinants of contemporary international relations. With the help of their supervisor, seminar participants formulate a suitable topic, locate and select the literature and primary sources, determine the structure of the dissertation, and finally prepare and present the individual chapters. The students learn to analyse the literature relevant to their research topic in a manner that takes into account both the regulations concerning the use of others' research and the principles of critical discussion.

MK_9 Language Module

Modern foreign language – education in a foreign language, preparing the students to communicate with a variety of interlocutors at a B2+ CERF level.

Foreign language labs – specialist language classes providing practice in translating texts concerning international relations and writing own texts in a foreign language.
